

About Organizations

An organization can be thought of as a namespace that is completely separate from other organizations managed within an AtScale instance.

An organization has its own administrators, users and groups, system roles, and projects. Organizations are separate silos and objects cannot be moved between them.

All AtScale installations contain an initial organization named default. If you don't define other organizations, this is the organization in which all of your AtScale projects are created. This is also the organization in which the AtScale demo projects are created.
